Who is in the room?
“The future is here, it is just unevenly distributed”.
William Gibson
Removing carbon from our power and transportation systems can provide 94% of the reduction in CO$_2$ emissions that we need to stay below 1.5°C
Now is not the time for business as usual.
The world around energy has changed.
Access has more value than ownership.
Connecting ideas now transcends protecting them.

But what did they see?
They saw that isolation and going it alone, were no longer viable.
They saw the need for speed, scale, enhanced security, accelerated innovation and global talent.
Which inspired mass collaboration.
They recognized that we now live in an open-source economy.
Why were they successful?
How was this transition possible?
